What's going on with births down under in Australia?

The data are quite stunning.

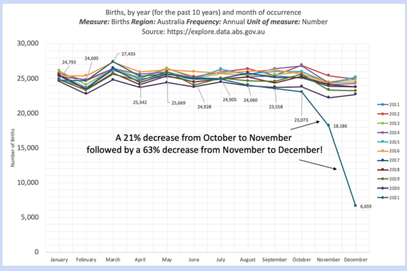
I was watching a video on Brighteon today and an Australian MP named George Christensen was talking about dropping birth rates in Australia based on birth statistics in the Australian Bureau of Statistics. The numbers he was quoting were so crazy that I had to find the data source (tx to Joel Smalley) and reproduce the findings.

He was right.

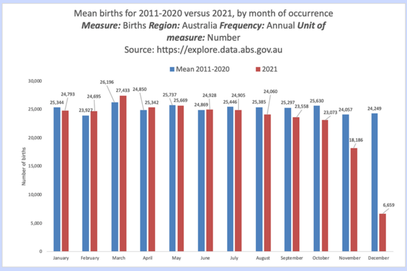
You ready? Look at the data for the past 10 years. compared with 2021. What on earth could be CAUSING a combined 71% decrease in births from October to December? It's been a bloody year so, it is unlikely to me that the data have not been processed and entered which would mean that these are the real numbers. Really?

If there is, in fact, a data lag resulting in the mere appearance of birth decreases in late 2021, then in the face of many other countries reporting lower birth rates of late, I think it is vital that the birth data is processed with expedience.



You can go to this site to download the data yourself and have a look.

You can also calculate the mean month data for the past 10 years and plot it against 2021 like this:



I cannot explain this but it reminds me of the extreme anomaly in the U.S. VAERS database when you plot total AE counts for the past 10 years. Except, in the opposite direction and by year, as opposed to month.

I have read reports from a few other countries that affirm your finding, including small samples looking at stillbirth and live birth rates, but nothing that attempts to look at this globally. Is anyone doing a global scan? Comparing these figures to population uptake of the shots? I don't imagine many countries are actually tracking data on vac status vs. birth rate (but they should be.) Thanks for keeping an eye on these issues...and analyzing the data for us the way the alphabet agencies ought to be.

Thank you for this information.

Everyone should be downloading and saving this because it may be memory holed at some point. Then pass it on to everyone you know.

Then the News outlets should all be reporting it. If this last item is not happening, something is wrong. Perhaps they are owned by the same guy/group causing this disaster. Maybe we can get Tucker Carlson to report it? Sky News, Australia?

Many thanks to those with Intellectual Curiosity like Jessica!

This is one of the emails I received the other day. I get hundreds daily, and I am hearing you all.
This particular note spoke loudly to me and this lovely person gave me permission to share her words.
